agreement provides for an Irish executive responsible to the Irish parliament, but whether he will be known as president or premier is not known. As in the case of Canada and Australia there will be a representative of the crown in Ireland. He will fill the position of British governor general, but it is not certain that he will hold this title.

The removal of British troops from Ireland will begin as soon as the Irish and British parliaments have approved the agreement. The Black and Tans—a semi-military body—will be withdrawn simultaneously. The hatred of the south Irish was directed against the Black and Tans more strongly than against the regular soldiers.

The gist of press comment follows: Daily News: "It is the most important event in the history of England and Ireland. We hope the curtain has been run down for the last time on this tragedy."

Newspapers Approve. Daily Mail: "It was well done. It meets with the general approval of the whole country."

Daily Express: "It is impossible to exaggerate the relief. The Irish free state is now an accomplished fact. We emerge from darkness into light, into a united empire."

Daily Herald: "It is like waking up in a new and better world."

News Letter (Belmont): "The terms require careful scrutiny. The proposal for a boundary commission cuts across a principle dear to the northern people."

Times: "Reason has prevailed. It will constitute one of the greatest achievements in our imperial history."

SWISS TO ALLOW ZITA TO ATTEND HER SICK SON

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 7.—The Swiss federal council has granted permission for former Empress Zita of Austria-Hungary to come to Switzerland to attend her son Robert, during an operation for appendicitis.

The permission, however, stipulates she must leave as soon as her son is out of danger.

ONE KILLED, MANY INJURED IN COLLISION OF TROLLEYS

DAYTON, Ohio, Dec. 7.—One man was killed and a number of persons injured in a collision on the Cincinnati and Dayton traction line about 8:30 a. m.

The injured were brought to Dayton hospitals in automobiles. The cars crashed in a heavy fog and were badly wrecked.

NURSE PICTURES 'FLO'S' CONTROL OVER STILLMAN

"Certainly Knew How to Handle Banker," She Testifies In Divorce Action.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 7.—"Florence Leeds certainly knew how to handle James Stillman, and she always kept after him, too."

In this casual fashion, Mary Farney, a trained nurse, of New York, summarized her impressions of the affair of the banker and the show girl when she testified in the Stillman divorce case before Referee Gleason.

The nurse was employed by Florence Leeds at Stony Brook, L. I., in June, 1918, and remained there until August, when she went with the show girl to the "love nest" at 64 East Eighty-sixth street, New York, where Jay Ward Leeds was born on September 17 of that year.

Miss Farney identified a photograph of the banker as the man whom the former "Century chicken" contacted so easily. She added: "He used to come to Stony Brook three times a week or so, and he was very nervous while the baby was expected. He was always telephoning when he was away."

"But Mrs. Leeds was not nervous. She seemed to know what she wanted and she always got it. Once her dog, a terrier, went mad and had to be shot. She wanted a new dog right away for a pet. Mr. Stillman told her he was busy and that he would get her a dog when he could, but she insisted that she wanted it right away, and she got it right away, too."

After the little family moved to Manhattan, the nurse explained, the banker's nervousness increased, and his telephonic communications became ever more frequent. But she intimated that he was more anxious over the condition of Flo Leeds than of the child, even after Jay's birth, and she added:

"When the infant was shown to him, after Dr. Ogilvie had assisted it into the world, Stillman asked about Mrs. Leeds' health first of all. That always seemed to worry him."

Then came Mabel J. Thorne, who described her period of employment by Mrs. Leeds at 13 East Sixty-fifth street for three weeks in December, 1917. This young woman also identified the banker's photograph and said:

"Mrs. Leeds called him Mr. Stillman at first before me, and then later she got to calling him Jimmy. They were sort of light housekeeping then, I guess, for Jimmy brought her a colander and some jelly one night."

TROOPS GUARD PACKING PLANTS AT SO. ST. PAUL

Governor of Minnesota Calls Out Militia to Prevent Illegal Picketing.

By International News Service. SOUTH ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 7.—Four hundred State guardsmen under command of Adj. Gen. W. F. Henrow are doing guard duty in the strike area of the Swift and Armour packing plants here today. They were ordered out by Governor Preus, following an appeal of the mayor here, and Sheriff James Dunn, of Dakota county, who declared that they were unable to keep open the avenues of entrance to the various packing plants.

According to a statement of the adjutant general, it will be the duty of the troops to open up the picket line now surrounding the plants, so as to permit all workers to come and go without molestation.

"Peaceful picketing and missionary work shall not be interfered with," he said.

The decision of the governor to call out State troops came as a result of riots yesterday in which several of the strike-breakers were severely beaten, and two cars of food and blankets, which were being sent to the plants, were unloaded by strikers and thrown into the river.

FURNITURE OF DE BEARN SOLD IN BALTIMORE

Crowds Flock to Auction of Antiques Covering Many Periods.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 7.—Beds of the Ming Dynasty, highboys of the Louis XV period, vases of the Kang-Hai period, commodore of the Louis XVI period, and rugs, desks, tables and paintings, chairs and whatnots from many other periods were put up at auction yesterday.

They and other furniture were owned by the Prince de Bearn, of France, who couldn't get a house in Washington big enough for it all and had to rent a furnished house.

The sale was held at 705 Cathedral street, where everything was in place as though it had been used to furnish that residence. It began at 1 o'clock and automobiles lined the curb for nearly a block in each direction all afternoon, while inside Baltimore society women, collectors and furniture dealers bid against each other for historic pieces.

The sale netted $14,857.50 the first day. It will be continued today, beginning at 1 p. m.

Two paintings brought the highest prices. One called "In the Garden," by Jean Antoine Watteau, brought $3,000. The other by Jean Baptiste Greux, "Portrait of Lady with Dog," was sold for $1,500. The purchaser of both of these was A. A. Friend, of New York. They came from the Chateau de Cleres, which belonged to Prince de Bearn's grandfather and had belonged to the Prince's ancestors for more than four generations.

Old Persian rugs sold for low prices, some for as little as $35. Mrs. Isaac Emerson bought one silk rug, said to be worth $2,000, for $225. Mrs. William Keyser got a set of seven dining-room chairs for $20, and Mrs. George C. Jenkins bought a rare old red lacquer cabinet for $175.

In today's sale several suites of period bedroom furniture will be sold together with old Chinese rugs that have been in Prince de Bearn's Castle Sermoise in France. A good many tapestries, Persian rugs and Chinese porcelains will also be disposed of.

PHYSICIAN ON GRILL IN DEATH OF DR. RADOM

Unnamed Bridgeport Medic Alleged to Be Same Who Spread Previous Reports.

BRIDGEPORT, Dec. 7.—Having abandoned the theory of suicide in the death of Dr. Elizabeth L. Radom, whose body was found near the Fairfield estate of Miss Annie B. Jennings by duck hunters early Saturday morning, the police are making an investigation which has resulted in the following developments:

A prominent local physician, who was a friend of the dead woman, was grilled for two hours by Coroner John J. Phelan.

The movements of this doctor on Friday and Saturday nights are under the closest scrutiny. James Spill, garage man, insists that this physician greatly resembles one of two men who were with Dr. Radom at his garage late Friday night.

The physician, who was examined, since the finding of the body has, by several acts, aroused the suspicions of the prosecutor's office, it is said by officials.

Besides making independent investigations and generally obtruding himself into the case, he is said to have caused the spread of stories that Miss Radom committed suicide through melancholy, because she could not marry a Hartford physician whom she loved, as he was afflicted with tuberculosis.

An official of the prosecutor's office believes there was more than friendship existing between the physician and the dead woman.

The question of exhuming the body was put to Bacon Wakeman, prosecutor of the town, who said he had not ordered the body exhumed for an autopsy.

"I Wish You the Same"

In Which an "Above Average" American Citizen Tells How He Was Helped to Solve a Problem That Is Yours as It Was His—And the Most Important One of All.

success if you managed them the way you do your own? And he put his arm over my shoulder, affectionately, as if to lessen the possible sting of that innocent-sounding query.

"Listen, old man," he continued, "you know I think the world and all of you, don't you? Mull over that question I asked you, and if you feel like it drop into the bank and let me tell you about a plan I know would help you immensely." I promised I would—"when I got around to it."

We Take Inventory of "Goods on Hand"

That night, soon as the dinner dishes were done, I told Fred about meeting him. Told her about his question and what an impression it had made on me; asserted a little dramatically, made, and the time had come for a showdown on our finances—and a "right about face" in our methods. (She was to blame, bless her.) We took stock, she and I.

$117.28 cash in the bank, $200 in Liberty bonds—left. A five thousand dollar life insurance policy on which I'd paid the premiums for eight years. A beautifully engraved certificate representing 150 shares of "Victory Oil and Refining Co." stock. (Shall not a word about that—it's a sore spot with me.)

That was all. Not a very wonderful showing for a fellow my age who'd always made fairly good money. When I think of what I could have saved.

Next morning was brilliantly sunny. Things looked so much more cheerful—a natural bright-morning reaction, I guess. I felt like a million on the way down to the office. What was the use of all this fretting? I was still young; the world still lay ahead. If you're my age or younger you've felt the same way a thousand times.

But I dropped round at the bank that noon, anyway, and hitched a chair up to Fred Phillips' desk, and him, frankly, that I was interested in what he'd said yesterday—and that I'd like to know what he was for me in this plan of his.

"May I talk plainly, Jack?" he asked me.

"Right straight out," I declared. "That's what I came for."

"You're 37. Thirteen years to go before you're 50, twenty-eight before you're 65. Thirteen more real producing years, because it's dangerous to figure on high earning power afterward—but in all twenty-eight years left to you in which to create an estate, to establish your financial independence. About right?"

I admitted that probably it was.

"I Haven't the Resources I Should Have"

"Now, then. You've got to get safely fixed in the business world, I mean—by 40, and financially independent by 45. Let's say that, happily, you're secure in your present connection; you've advanced steadily, you're a valuable man and can count on future advancement with increased salary. Have you the money today you ought to have?"

(To be continued Friday.)
